Example: string name = ""; string... if (canTrim(name)) { // do something } Can I perhaps first check to see if the string is empty? A: I would rather write if (name.Trim()!="") { } in this case, if the name is empty the if will return false. A: You can check: if (name.Length == 0) // Do something else // Do something else A: As others have suggested, you can check for length: string trimmedName = name.Trim(); // Or trimmedName = name.TrimEnd(); if (trimmedName.Length == 0) // Do something else // Do something else
