All rights reserved.We are excited to announce the first of our monthly community curated meetup events to start this spring! Our first event will be a meetup on building applications using React and Redux. We've co-organized a meetup event at Washington D.C.'s BlockchainCenter which is a non-profit co-working space dedicated to fostering innovative new technologies and decentralized networks. The first of our events will be a meetup on building applications using React and Redux. The application of React and Redux has become a common stack for building modern and highly interactive web apps in web and mobile. We will give an overview of the two technologies and provide attendees with hands-on experience on building a simple application. Speakers Dylan Earl - Developer at Gnosis (founding team) Dylan is a developer at Gnosis, building the Gnosis marketplace app using React, Redux, Firebase, and Flux. Dylan is the co-organizer of our meetup series. Dylan comes from a background in research and mathematical foundations and has been programming for almost two decades. Prior to joining Gnosis, Dylan worked at Apple and Google for a total of five years. Dylan earned his degree in Mathematics from the University of Waterloo and is currently pursuing a Masters degree at Johns Hopkins University's Center for Talented Youth. He can be found on GitHub under the name geos1. Matthew Heusser - Developer at Gnosis (founding team) Matthew is a developer at Gnosis and is a member of the team that started the React and Redux meetup series. In his spare time, he focuses on researching in the areas of distributed systems, programming languages and parallel and distributed computing. Cody Vansintjens - Developer at Gnosis (founding team) Cody is a software developer at Gnosis. She will be giving a presentation on the fundamentals of React and Redux. Cody is the co-organizer of our React and Redux meetup series. Prior to joining the Gnosis team, Cody graduated from the University of Waterloo. She also worked at Bosch and General Electric. Cody enjoys open source and has worked for several major software companies.

a free-flowing gel, which is transparent and uniform in the vertical direction due to its good filler structure. The transparent polyacrylamide gel has been widely used in fields such as observation and detection, chemical analysis, fermentation, and separation. In the preparation of polyacrylamide gel, a polyacrylamide gel is prepared by polymerizing (meth)acrylamide monomer and at least one of the (meth)acrylamide dimer as a crosslinking agent in the presence of a polymerization initiator. In the process of preparing the polyacrylamide gel, a polymerization initiator is added to monomer to initiate the polymerization reaction. The polymerization initiator generally used to prepare a polyacrylamide gel in the prior art is as follows: Ethylene glycol tetraacetic acid as a chelating agent (as shown in formula (a) below) is used as a metal ion chelating agent to increase the stability of the polyacrylamide gel and to prevent it from freezing at low temperature. ##STR1##

(Meth)acrylamide monomer and this polymerization initiator are mixed to form the polyacrylamide gel. In addition, the mixture is heated at from 20.degree. to 50.degree. C. in order to obtain the desired hardness and viscosity of the polyacrylamide gel. As seen from formula (a), ethylene glycol tetraacetic acid, as a chelating agent, has an ability to chelate metal ion. However, polyacrylamide gel prepared by the method of using a chelating agent is weak in acid. A report today claimed that 90 percent of the problems in the world are caused by 10 percent of the people. Political pundits are no stranger to this type of debate. One who is not a fan of the report is Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney. Romney has made it clear that he doesn't think the U.S. can fix the world and suggested that the Obama Administration is the one to blame for what the world is facing today. "If you look at where we are today,

He is, according to the North Korean government, a real human being after all. The world has been underwhelmed by the images of North Korea's state news agency Rodong Sinmun publishing photos of a man called Kim Pyong-il, who it says is the "father of North Korea's economy." But perhaps that is because he is one of a handful of people who have the privilege to know the truth about Kim Jong-un's father Kim Jong-il – the late leader of the North Korean state.

Kim Pyong-il is regarded as an elite engineer and a member of North Korea's "Kitepresidency," or administration of the North's top party body, the Central Committee, and was appointed deputy governor of the party's Manmadong province in August 2010. His position was confirmed by an official KCNA report on a cabinet meeting in August 2012. A KCNA statement praised Kim Pyong-il as "being respected as an engineer who possesses a revolutionary political consciousness and good moral principles," while noting that he "voluntarily offered his service for the party and the revolution.” Little is known about Kim Pyong-il’s background – there are very few photos of him on the internet and there is only one entry in Wikipedia. A KCNA statement on Tuesday, however, does praise him, calling him a “masterful politician and statesman.” It also hailed him as the “sworn president of North Korea’s economy, which was founded on the basis of Mount Paektu.” North Korea’s economy is nearly identical to that of Cuba’s: it is highly centralized, with the state holding the top positions in everything from iron production to shipbuilding. Cuba’s leader, Castro, was given the job of head of state in 1976, the year Kim Il-sung became party leader, and the two men worked together to create the island's military and to build the economic base of the communist regime. Although the Cuban state media has never acknowledged Kim Jong-il's involvement in North Korea's economy, he remains revered in the country and North Korea experts say that he and Kim Jong-il controlled the economy "at all times." Kim Jong-
