JPEG or TIFF? If you're using a digital camera, you can use either JPEG or TIFF files. JPEG (pronounced _jay-peg_) stands for _joint photographic experts group_, and it's the most common file format for photos taken with digital cameras. JPEG files are typically about 100 to 200 percent larger than TIFF files — depending on the quality of the JPEG. JPEGs tend to degrade images to the point where you can't easily edit them. TIFF is a format designed for creating high-quality images. A TIFF file's size is equivalent to that of an Adobe Photoshop file. You can't (easily) edit JPEGs, but you can work with them in many ways. To edit a JPEG, you need the original file or an editable version created with a program such as Adobe Photoshop Elements. To create your own file format, you must invest in a program that creates high-resolution, high-quality files, such as Adobe Photoshop or Adobe Photoshop Elements. On a photo editor program, select the Image tab, and in the File Format list, select the TIFF (or Tagged Image File Format) format. ## Getting Acquainted with the Interface When you start using Photoshop, it may feel similar to other image-editing applications such as Paint Shop Pro, Adobe Photoshop Elements, or Paint Shop Pro for Mac. For many people, the key differences are that using Photoshop brings extra layers of complexity and options to your workflow that aren't available in the other programs. Figure 4-1 shows an example of the default interface. In the upper-left corner you can choose which document you want to work in by clicking its icon. The upper-right corner of the interface represents the active layer, and the lower-right shows the active tool. Typically, an object that you see in your image is the active layer. You can switch to another layer by clicking its icon (lower-left corner) or by selecting

Q: Regex for capturing date and time strings from a String I have a scenario where i need to capture a date string from a string without the time part. For example, {dt_string} now date1 {dt_string} now date2 I need to capture date1 and date2. I have tried this, ^[0-9]{2}\s[0-9]{2}\s[0-9]{2}\s.* But this also captures the {dt_string} part. I have also tried this, ^[0-9]{2}\s[0-9]{2}\s.* Can anyone tell me how to capture these dates without the time part. Thanks. A: The simplest regex for this would be: .\b\d{2}(?:[-/:]\d{2}){2}\b. Effective chemosensory camouflage by a spotted salamander. Spotted salamanders, Ambystoma maculatum, are broadly distributed throughout the southeastern United States and northern Mexico. Despite this broad range and high densities of individuals, the role of chemosensory cues is not well understood. In the present study, we investigated the role of chemosensory cues in the aggressive encounter of spotted salamanders with predatory fish. Free-ranging spotted salamanders spent more time hidden from perceived predation risk when paired with a mussel-baited dummy than when paired with controls that released only ambient chemicals. In a more comprehensive study, we tested how different types of chemical camouflage and different chemosensory cues affected the duration of camouflage. Salamanders hid significantly longer from predatory fish when paired with a modified dummy that released a distinctive mussel odour, when paired with a modified dummy that released a mussel odour and the chemical signature of urine, and when paired with a modified dummy that released an odour profile of a different species. Presence of the odour of a mussel had the greatest influence on hiding behaviour, whereas release of urine had a similar effect. However, only the presence of a mussel odour could mask the odour of non-native competitors. These findings demonstrate that spotted salamanders can successfully use chemosensory cues to hide from predatory fish, and the combination of urodele odour profiles and mussel od
