Retinopathy of prematurity (ROP) is one of the complications of preterm delivery, associated with high mortality rates. Symptoms of ROP usually occur after retinal vascularization is complete in the periphery, although some patients may present with strabismus without other ROP manifestations.

We describe a patient with no previous history of prematurity who, after experiencing preterm delivery and intubation, developed strabismus due to ROP. The patient was a 1-week-old boy with a gestational age of 24 weeks and birth weight of 1140 g. He had no other preterm delivery problems and was successfully treated with laser photocoagulation. ROP is an entity in itself, but the finding of strabismus without other ROP complications could be overlooked. After the recent news that a man died at the hands of gang members in North Philly, things got a bit more awkward. The man was shot outside of the Rollin' 28 Club on the 900 block of N. 25th Street on Aug. 19. Two suspects fled the scene, and police have been searching for them for two weeks. 6d1f23a050
